Sport Unlimited Innovation Fund

The Sport Unlimited Innovation Fund is provided by South Yorkshire Sport and is available for sports clubs and community groups in the area to provide out of school sporting opportunities for young people aged between 11 and 19.

The fund is particularly focused on youngsters defined by Sport England as "semi-sporty" - young people who participate in the two hours of PE a week on the national curriculum and up to an hour of another sporting or physical activity outside of school hours. Projects should attract people from this kind of background, as opposed to young people who are keen and regular participants in sporting activity. The fund can support a maximum cost of £60 per head for the number of youngsters involved in the programme of sessions.

Successful organisations will be asked to provide between 8 and 10 sessions, each expected to last a minimum of one hour. Ideally, South Yorkshire Sport would like to support projects that deliver one session per week, although this requirement can be flexible if it is in the interests of programme delivery.

Application deadline: 21 October - for projects to take place during the Spring term (January - March 2010)
