TARGETING THE INACTIVE

Focus of the learning and development new skills	£1,000
Intent	The intent was to provide opportunities for targeted young people within the Middle Schools to learn and develop new skills. The motivation was within the Middle School system there are limited opportunities for some children to access opportunities.
Target Group	We targeted those young people that have not had the opportunity to represent their school, as they feature below first and second team standard but do not qualify as having Special Educational Needs.
Implementation	We provide activities skills festivals in 6 different sports over the course of the academic year The sessions were delivered by local sports club coaches and PE staff within schools They happened 6 times over the year and the venues were located to the respective local community sports club i.e. Rugby at the Rugby Club, Hockey at the School that hosts the local hockey club The events were timed across the school year and respective of the sporting seasons and the school's curriculum maps. We partnered with the local sports clubs and had coaches attend where possible
Impact	Each of the 5 Middle Schools attending with 14 (minibus full) young people from the targeted cohort Young people were able to develop confidence and self-belief as there were with their peers of a similar standard and the events focused on learning instead of competition Schools have reported up to 95% of young people attending had not represented their school in sport and PE before and over two-thirds of the young people have since participated in one club activity when they returned to school

Challenges	Schools being able to pursued the young people to attend, as they historically have been over looked and felt it was a mistake them being selected The challenge was overcome by PE staff explaining to the young people the event has been designed for them and there would be other young people attending of a similar experience.
Sustainability	The format has become suitable as its been introduced into the local School Games programme of events
Top Tips	Ensure staff are aware of the Intent levels so they can select the appropriate young people and work with them to develop their confidence to attend.
Quotes	Charis – GIA – “ I never thought I would get the opportunity to represent my school, as I’m not the best or worse at PE, I’m so glad I took part”
